When it is remembered how large a place the profession of law fills in this country, and how the very considerable representation of the Law Society in the House of Commons say for a couple of years would be partly saved by diminishing the outlay of the permanent scheme. In any case it is urgent that the city should be supplied with water. The present arrangement—though it is the best that the

No one can be satisfied with the state of the Law in this country, unless the authorities can manage—is insufficient for comfort and health, and the cost of the temporary supply might be fully charged against the capital account of the permanent scheme.

The question of water supply was at present a great grievance, but he did not think the people should blame the Corporation for any defect in that direction. He had to depend upon a supply from the heavens, and therefore, he did not think any blame could be attached to the council. The Government, he might say, had them away with regard to the matter.

Many people thought the contractors were getting a great deal, but tonight they were getting a very restricted time and a very small amount of light. A contractor had enough difficulty to get a road with in his business. It was common knowledge that should be a man who was able to give accounts of the performance of his contract, and sometimes it was thought that he should almost have a bank at his disposal. The contractor had to contend with the elements of labour and other things, and he was glad to find that the Minister for Works, and his colleagues for the assistance they had rendered the contractors. THE PREVENTION OF TYPHOID.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

TORPEDOES OF THE AUSTRIAN NAVY.—

The line of the east Austro-Italian war, in 1866, the Italian Government made the greatest efforts to put its ports in a state of defence against an attack of the Italian fleet. Torpedoes in large numbers were sunk therein, and all the communications of these maritime places were ordered to be under very great vigilance. The torpedoes are placed on several submarine lines, quite near each other. They are at a certain depth below the level of the water, and do not rise to the surface, giving no signs of their presence. Each of them is connected by wire with the post of observation situated at a sufficiently high point on the coast to allow the port to be seen. The water in the whole lagoon is dark. It is well. The room, which is quite dark, has a lens that faces the port. The luminous rays from the exterior travel to this, become refracted, and pass through the lens to a prism, which directs them upon a sheet of glass lying horizontally upon a table in the centre of the room. According to the well-known laws of optics, an image of the port is formed upon the glass. Black points marked upon this image indicate the exact site of each torpedo. As these points bear numbers that are reproduced round without having anything to fear. It is probable that this was due to a knowledge of the danger that the Italian fleet would have experienced in attacking the Austro-Hungarian vessels that the latter were protected against all surprise arrangements analogous to those just described are now adopted by most of the navies of Europe.—Le Naturel.

LARGE SUBDIVISIONS,

LITHOGRAPH NOW OBTAINABLE.

RAILWAY LINE to PENRITH is duplicating, which (soon done) will render the district more attractive, and materially improve values of land.

AUCTION SALE on the GROUND,
NEXT SATURDAY, 30th MAY,

FREE RENT at 11.55 a.m. to Penrith, then free vehicles.

The subdivisions per plans 1 and 2 have been so arranged that purchasers may take a small allotment or consolidate a large area surrounded by roads and streets.

The district is famed for its healthfulness and charming picturesque scenery—mountains, glens, plains, and the famed Nepean River.

The soil is adapted for gardens or orchards, many of the latter being developed in prospect of ensuring a good reward to the cultivator.

It is expected that on the completion of the duplicated Railway Line to Penrith an increased population will settle around the suburbs of Penrith and that these lands become more readily sought after, and the value of the land will be greatly enhanced.
